Information

In January 2012, the Eagle Butte Hospital in Eagle Butte, South Dakota, was replaced with a newly constructed alternative rural health center. This is a modern, technologically advanced facility with enough space and staff to provide an expanded level of health care services specifically designed to meet the needs of the Cheyenne River Service Unit population. The new facility has an 8 bed acute care nursing unit, 2 bed low risk birthing unit, emergency room, expanded outpatient department, dental, community health department and a full array of ancillary (including mammography) and support services. Additionally, several tribally 638 operated programs are incorporated into the new facility.

"The Flandreau Santee Sioux Tribal Health Clinic is a Joint Venture Agreement between the Tribe and Indian Health Services (I.H.S.). The 38,000 sf building provides space for dental, optical, pharmacy, medical and behavior health clinic, radiology, lab, physical therapy and community health services. As part of the Joint Venture Agreement, I.H.S. requires the building to achieve a LEED silver certification rating. The design of the building incorporates a number of cultural features, as dictated by the project's cultural committee. For example, the "Turtle" in Sioux culture symbolizes health and longevity. The turtle symbol can be found throughout the building but most prevalent in the drop-off canopy design, which takes on the image of a turtle shell. In addition, the seven council fires are represented as sculptural elements in front of the windows of the large community room near the front entrance of the building."

"The Oyate Health Center is a tribally-owned and operated walk-in primary care clinic located in Rapid City, South Dakota. The facility is under the management of the Great Plains Tribal Chairmen's Health Board. When the Great Plains Tribal Chairmen's Health Board took over management responsibilities of the Rapid City Service Unit on behalf of the Oglala Sioux and Cheyenne River Sioux Tribe in July 2019, it was both an expression of sovereignty, and the deployment of a proven strategy."

Information

The Woodrow Wilson Keeble Memorial Health Care Center also participates in Improving Patient Care (IPC). On May 14, 2009 the Sisseton Wahpeton Oyate Health Care Center changed its name to the Woodrow Wilson Keeble Memorial Health Care Center to honor the memory of Master Sergeant Woodrow Wilson Keeble. Woodrow Keeble is a full-blooded member of the Sisseton Wahpeton Oyate and a veteran of both World War II and the Korean War. In March 2008 Woodrow Keeble was awarded the Medal of Honor for his actions in the Korean War. He is the first full blooded Sioux to receive this honor.

Information

Wagner Health Care Facility is an ambulatory clinic providing 7am - 11pm patient centered care, with six Primary Care Providers and two PA-C's. Wagner IHS Health Center is located on the Yankton Sioux Reservation and provides services to patients from surrounding reservations and communities throughout South Dakota, Iowa, Minnesota and Nebraska. The clinic contains nine exam rooms. Other medical providers in the fields of Obstetrics, Cardiology, and Nephrology are provided by contract medical providers each month. The service unit received their accreditation as an ambulatory center and for Medical Home on December 20, 2017, which is valid through December 20, 2020.
